Kashmir A military training exercise conducted on a firing range in the Khour area (near the northern borders of India and Pakistan) resulted in two anti tank rockets landing within the boundary of a nearby school. The rockets reportedly overshoot the target area and failed to detonate upon landing. The school was not occupied at time and no injuries or extensive property damage was reported. The incident did however spark a heated protest by the community who are calling for the range to be closed and for the training to be moved to other locations.
