The Army released a Best Management Practice (BMP) manual as a guide for the range community on how to address or mitigate any identified areas of concern on small arms ranges. The manual provides guidance to support the selection and implementation of management methods for erosion or lead migration issues based on site specific use and environmental characteristics. The range area evaluation procedures, range operation and management strategies and range modification guidance discussed in the BMP Manual are designed to be low cost and feasible approaches for any installation to use to improve the environmental quality and insure the long-term sustainability of essential training areas. This manual will serve as a reference to small arms range design manuals and guidelines issued by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.
