Alberta, Canada A UXOInfo.com reader working on a project last month sorting scrap metal which included munitions debris came across an item that the team could not positively identify. Pictures of the unknown item are shown below including its projectile shape body with a threaded base plug. The scrap material where the item was found in is believed to be from Canadian Forces Base Suffield, Canada's largest military training base.

If you think you can identify the item from the pictures please respond by adding a comment to this article. Thank you.
