Nazareth, Israel An Israeli Military Industries warehouse full of munitions located in northern Israel caught on fire. The fire raged out of control for several hours as firefighters were forced to temporarily cease operations over concerns of exploding ammunition. The good news is that Friday is not a regular work day at the facility so only a small handful of personnel were working when the fire broke out. All workers were safely evacuated from the scene and no injuries or deaths were reported. The cause of the fire is unknown at this time.
