

History Channel Releases Series on the UXO Industry

Posted At : September 7, 2012 9:08 AM | Posted By : Admin

Related Categories: Other

Ottawa, Ontario The History Channel recently aired the first episode of 'Bomb Hunters', a new reality series following two bomb-disposal crews removing and disposing of UXO across Canada under the UXO Legacy Sites Program. Officials hope the new series will increase awareness of the UXO problem across Canada.

On an related note, UXOInfo.com was recently contacted by a major cable network in the States interested in developing a dynamic new series focusing on the explosive aspect of UXO industry in the U.S. The un-named cable network (they did not want us to release their name) is looking for potential candidates to interview for the show.

So, if you consider yourself a seasoned UXO Technician and have a desire to share your experiences, you are asked to email uxohuntercasting@gmail.com. In the email please include with your name, contact info, and a photo or videolink. Also let them know why you're perfect for the job and include an interesting UXO story. Note that submissions without photos WILL NOT be considered.

Although UXOInfo.com is not associated with the new series, please tell them that Rhonda at UXOInfo.com sent you. If you would like to CC me on the email you can by including my email on the CC line: rhonda@uxoinfo.com.

Good Luck,

Rhonda
rhonda@uxoinfo.com.